Why Not a 'Honolulu Trophy'?

THE chamber of commerce of Spokane, Washington, is one of the real wide-awake civic organizations of the country. Furthermore, it differs from most chambers of commerce of the cities of the country in that it takes more than a local interest in the military and naval development of the nation. It has a military committee which keeps its members informed as to the needs of the country and the progress that the preparedness measures are making, besides giving them an intelligent understanding of what defense plans will most help the whole country.

Although near Spokane there is situated Fort George Wright, one of the most attractive of the mainland army posts, a post which in normal times is garrisoned by two battalions of infantry, the Spokane chamber has never gone on record as having asked that that garrison be increased at the expense of more strategically important points of the Northwest.

At present this chamber is urging a business man's camp to be held near Spokane next summer and has already pledged enough of its members to attend to make the project a success.

Some years ago this body, although Spokane is an inland city and far from the seacoast, presented to the navy department a costly and beautiful silver cup known as "The Spokane Cup," for excellence in marksmanship by all naval ships carrying guns of six inch and smaller.

This trophy has been the object of keen contests in the Navy since 1908 and by excellence in shooting in the Pacific fleet will this year be possessed by the cruiser San Diego, whose two turret crews have just made 100 and 88 per cent respectively. The trophy has never before left the Atlantic fleet, the battleship Arkansas having held the prize for the past two years.

The gift of this cup has made Spokane a well known name in the Navy and the amount of advertising it has brought the Inland Capital has been considerable.

Honolulu is today the most important military and naval city in the country, with a prospect of immense increase in importance in the future, when Pearl Harbor reaches its completion and the military garrison attains its maximum strength.

A manifestation of real interest in the Army and the Navy by our own chamber of commerce is a lesson which we can well learn from the Washington city and why should there not be a "Honolulu Cup" for the gun crews of the Navy to compete for, or some suitable trophy for the soldiers of the Nation in competition?

Pan-Pacific Progress

THE invitation of the Pan-Pacific Club of Honolulu to each and every country of the Pacific, as well as to each of the Hawaiian Islands, to make an attractive exhibit in the building the club has had placed at its disposal at the California-Panama Exposition in San Diego, is well worthy of acceptance.

On behalf of Hawaii the Pan-Pacific club of this city has done well to assume the financial obligations of the building, which is one of the largest and best located at the San Diego Exposition, and it is certainly good promotion work to be able to announce to the lands about the great ocean that Hawaii at San Diego is ready and willing to assume the part of host and to work through 1916 for the advancement of all Pacific lands and interests.

Already, practically every Pacific land has sent attractive exhibits to be displayed in the Pan-Pacific building at San Diego, and the general understanding is that at the close of 1916 these will come to Honolulu as the nucleus of a permanent Pan-Pacific commercial museum to be maintained here: a project which several of the Pacific governments have already intimated will have their support.

The local Pan-Pacific club is endeavoring to arrange for a display of Hawaiian fish at San Diego, the Hawaiian fish to become eventually the beginning of a permanent aquarium supported by the city of San Diego. This project should have hearty local support, and it is hoped that the invitation to the commercial bodies of Hawaii, Kauai and Maui to gather interesting and attractive local material for exhibition in the Pan-Pacific building, will meet with active response.

The 1916 California-Panama Exposition at San Diego formally opens its doors on March 15 and closes them officially on the last day of 1916. With 1917 begins the work for the permanent Pan-Pacific exhibit and commercial museum at the Crossroads of the Pacific. All success to the comprehensive plans of the Pan-Pacific workers of every race and nationality in Hawaii.

R. W. Shingle's resignation will be an even greater surprise for Honoluluans than was his appointment to the board of supervisors. Mr. Shingle was not a member of the board long enough to effect all the improvements in the methods of public business which the public expected from him, but he did a number of things for which he deserves due credit. The slashing cuts in the last estimates passed are credited to him, while he has been one of the earnest pushers in the frontage tax developments and one of those who urged the action which has given the city a few miles of sidewalks in place of historic mudholes and ancient weed patches. Another thing Mr. Shingle has done for the city in his short term as supervisor and that is to make it plain that one business man on the board cannot perform miracles. It takes at least two or three to carry the load.

The Carnival Results

ANOTHER Carnival Week has passed into history, and a very satisfactory week it has been. From the standpoint of both the local spectator and the visitor, the program was a splendid one, well carried through, with a sufficiently wide scope of attractions to favor all tastes. The hitches have been minor ones and the delays have not been such as to seriously detract. To President Hagens of the Carnival corporation and his directors and executive secretary, unstinted credit is due, and the same is the share of the chairman of the various committees and their effective assistants. Honolulu owes a considerable debt of gratitude to the chairmen, especially, each one of whom, when the director general resigned, stepped forward and assumed a share of the burden, each performing his work and leading his committee in a way that brought very happy results.

The Ad Club played its part in Ad Club fashion, well and lustily.

The Japanese residents contributed a share in the program that made perhaps the finest impression of all the events on the malihini and will help the cause of internationalism throughout the mainland.

The soldiers played a greater part than ever in the general success of the week, not only in their splendid, formal turnout on Washington's Birthday, in their fighting trim, but on the athletic track, the baseball diamond, the fete and holiday parades, while very effective assistance was rendered the various committees by the non-coms, who helped as guards and ticket-takers. The military bands, too, in their formal programs and at the various dances and special events, helped very materially in keeping the Carnival spirit effervescent.

To the Chinese, the Koreans, the Filipinos and the representatives of the various nationalities here, praise is due, each race helping towards the desired effect of showing that in the Paradise of the Pacific there is no trace of the race-prejudice born from the small conceit of less favored and tradition-bound communities.

The Boy Scouts draw the special mention ribbon. The demonstration they gave as their share of the regular program was a good one, but what they did all through the week in the regular performance of their duty was the finest demonstration of the result of Scout training. The very fact that the services of these boys, for all sorts of commissions, was accepted, so generally and so confidently formed the highest compliment that could be paid them. The Scouts made good, Commissioner Wilder, here's three fingers in salute.

There is one class of workers who do not figure on the programs or in the press photographs or otherwise publicly, but who did a very big thing for the Carnival. These are the school teachers of Honolulu, who trained the children for their appearance in public, who gathered their classes and brought them into the selected spots on time and who, after the applause for others had died away, gathered up their charges and took them safely home again.

Another feature of the program, from the tourist standpoint especially, was the part played by the Hawaiians. The pageant scored heavily and will be one of the outstanding memories of the week for thousands of the strangers at Honolulu's holiday, while the "Night in Hae'waii" musical event is another of the things which many will never forget.

The splendid diversity of the program was shown in the series of athletic events conducted, in which recognized national champions took part and during which new records for the United States were established and the world's record for the hundred-yard dash equalled. Followers of sport had their choices between swimming, baseball, tennis and track events, each of very high order.

On the other hand, much was exceptionally well handled. The policing of the city was good and the behavior of the great crowds excellent. No serious accident due to the Carnival events or Carnival crowds is reported and the number of arrests for breaches of the law was below the average.

There were some mistakes, of course, during the week. Legitimate complaint may be made of the delay in starting some of the events, while in quite a few instances there were annoying mix-ups regarding the seating arrangements. The general street decorations for the Carnival were, to put it mildly, cheap and quite below the standards of former years instead of being better.

The Carnival just closed has been the most generally successful yet held and, although no financial reports have been made, the corporation has undoubtedly realized a good all-round profit, which surplus will be used to finance the events next February. Honolulu may well be satisfied with what has been, so long as the satisfaction with what has been done encourages something bigger and better. This we are certain to have.

The fact that one plantation paid neighboring "small farmers" over $627,000 for 1915 crop cane is positive evidence that the planters are not the soulless monopolists they have been painted. High prices for sugar means big profits and contentment for hundreds of homesteaders, as well as for the shareholders.

MRS. BURNINGHAM DIES
SUDDENLY IN HOSPITAL

Mrs. Eunice P. Burningham, the wife of Thomas A. Burningham of Fred L. Waldron, Limited, died suddenly at the Queen's Hospital yesterday afternoon about five o'clock. Mrs. Burningham before her marriage was Miss Eunice F. Gregg and was born in Elmira, New York, October 1, 1867. Mr. and Mrs. Burningham were married in this city about ten years ago. Mrs. Burningham was supposed to be recovering rapidly from the effects of an operation which took place at the Queen's a week ago Wednesday. Yesterday afternoon she was very bright and cheerful and bade her husband goodbye when it came time for him to leave her. They had been talking over plans for her return home. On her arrival at his home he was telephoned to return to the hospital immediately as his wife had become suddenly very ill. She died before he could reach her.

The funeral will be held from the undertaking parlors of H. H. Williams this afternoon at three o'clock. Cannon Ault will officiate.

DAMON PROPERTY
BRINGS BIG PRICE

Holdings At Fort and Hotel
Streets Are Sold For Sum of $77,000

Acting for a client whose name is kept secret for the present, the Waterhouse Trust Company, through F. E. Steere, has closed a deal for the purchase of the Damon property at the corner of Fort and Hotel streets for $77,000.

This property, owned by Mrs. Mary H. Damon, has been in the eyes of the public for a long time as it is necessary to cut off a portion of it to widen and improve Hotel street. The matter of the condemnation has been before the board of supervisors several times but so far nothing has been done. Up to the time of his death, Francis W. Damon, the owner, always refused to sell as the property was a good income-bearing investment and was under a long lease which is now about to expire.

The lot has a frontage of fifty-seven feet in Fort street and is thirty-seven feet deep. Thirteen feet will have to be taken to straighten out Hotel street but the improvement will be a big one and really make the corner more valuable than it is at present.

The price for which the property was sold will establish the value of it for condemnation purposes and the city will have to pay a great deal more for it now than if it had been condemned several years ago as was the intention.

It is understood that the three stores in the block pay about five hundred dollars a month rental and that the leases expire May 30, 1917.

MAUI PEOPLE REVIVE

As soon as the new constitution is procured a new constitution will be adopted and committee formed. Reports show that a new interest is being taken in Boy Scouts activities on Maui. In Wailuku there are two troops, John Kamaka being a scout master of one and Herbert Young of the other, which is a new troop.

The members of the council are Mathews, Carey, Lufkin, Wadsworth, Father Justin, Father Francis, McIluskey, Ensign Puck, Kamaka, Young, Kammechwa, Bro. Frank, Dr. Baldwin, and Crockett.

WAILUKU CATHOLIC CHURCH
OUTGROWS CONGREGATION

St. Anthony's Catholic Church in Wailuku, which was built forty years ago, is to be remodelled and enlarged to accommodate the greatly increased congregation. Plans for the work have been made by Honolulu architects, and it is estimated that the improvements will cost in the neighborhood of $12,000. Father Justin, who has the matter of raising the money in hand, has called a meeting of the congregation to devise ways and means for getting the cash. On March 9 an entertainment will be given at the Wailuku opera house for the purpose of helping the fund.
